
— A PLAIN-ENGLISH GUIDE

Foundation first.

A Plain-English Guide to Getting Started

Take care of the children first.

If a parent dies or becomes unable to act, a family should not be left wondering who can care for a child, make decisions, or reach the resources meant for that child. The first job of an estate plan is to put those answers in place. No one plans for the unimaginable—so plan for it now.

Protect your people first. Build from there.

A good estate plan starts with the people who depend on you. Those protections come first because they matter most—and they can be in place quickly. Everything else in your plan is built on them.

THE FOUNDATION

Protect the people who count on you

The core documents and decisions: a will or trust as appropriate, guardianship planning for children, powers of attorney, health-care directives, beneficiary coordination, and practical instructions that make the plan usable.

BUILT ON THE FOUNDATION

Add only what your life calls for

If your situation involves taxes, a business, or significant assets, those are addressed as part of your plan. If it doesn't, you don't pay for planning you don't need. Either way, your family is not left waiting.

Four questions to ask yourself.

01 Do you have a will or trust that fits your life today?

Many people have no plan at all, or one written years ago—before children, a move, or a new home. Either way, the starting point is the same: a short conversation about your life now.

02 Have you named who would make medical or financial decisions if you could not?

Many people assume a close family member can simply step in. Often they cannot without clear designations and coordinated documents. The answer begins with people you know and trust.

03 Who would care for your children—and who would manage what you leave them?

Those can be different people. Naming both keeps a court or institution from filling gaps you could have addressed yourself.

04 Will your plan change as your life does?

Some people think a first plan locks them in. It doesn't. A completed foundation makes later reviews simpler and focused on the questions that matter most.

— HOW IT WORKS

One short call. A clear path to signing.

Technology handles the routine paperwork, leaving more time for one-on-one conversations, your questions, and the thoughtful discussions at the heart of good estate planning.

01 A quick hello

Call Mr. Ted. The first call is short and complimentary—just an introduction. Afterward, you receive an email with a link to book your planning meeting.

03 A short questionnaire

A brief online intake that narrows down what you need. It is not the full inventory—just enough to point the work in the right direction.

05 A cost that fits your plan

Your fee is tied to a plan that meets your needs—but not more than you need—based on your wishes and your assets.

02 A 20-minute planning meeting

By Zoom, phone, or at your kitchen table. We talk about your family and goals, decide what your plan needs, and set one flat fee—so you know the number before work begins.

04 Your asset inventory

Once the direction is set, a guided inventory collects the details your documents depend on, through a secure process rather than email.

06 Review and sign

Once your documents are drafted, we review them together, answer your questions, and schedule your signing.

— BEFORE YOUR FIRST CALL

What to think about. No paperwork required.

- ✓ The people who depend on you—children, a spouse or partner, aging parents, pets.
- ✓ Who you would trust to make medical and financial decisions for you.
- ✓ Who you would want to raise your children, if it ever came to that.
- ✓ What you want protected: your home, a business, savings, family heirlooms.
- ✓ Any existing will, trust, or beneficiary forms—just whether they exist.
- ✓ The worries that made you think, "It's time."

Keep the first step simple. Do not send account numbers, balances, documents, or passwords by email or web form. If they are needed, the firm will arrange a secure method.

It's time to plan your estate. Let's do it.

(720) 378-8967

ted@mrted.ai · corlessestatelaw.com

5235 Old Stage Road, Boulder, Colorado · Zoom or in-home visits · 8am–8pm

SCAN TO CALL
MR. TED